

UK RESULTS

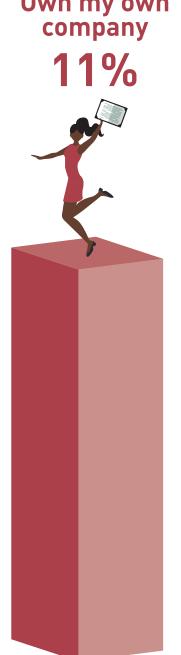

Millennials are focused on a career for me, paving their own path and developing the skills to ensure employment security. Managing others is low on their list; money and purpose matter much more. It is time to rethink people practices to attract, retain and develop the next generation of leaders.

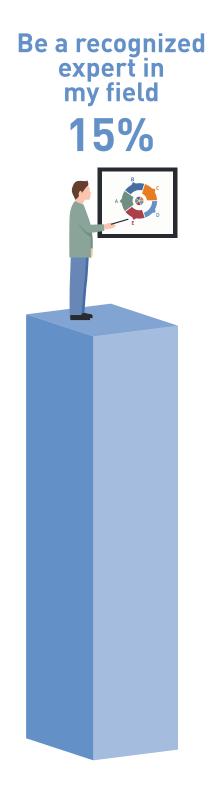

BEING THE BOSS IS A LOW PRIORITY

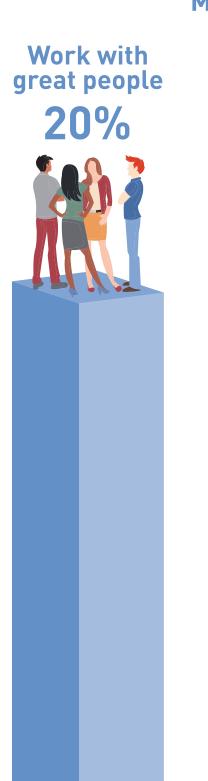

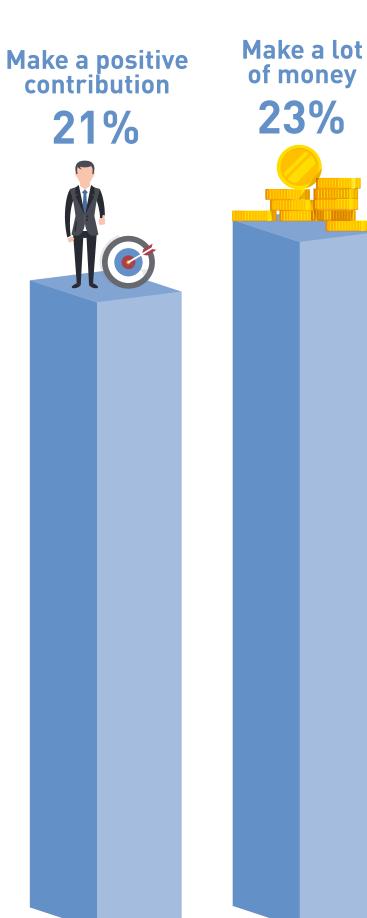

MEN ASPIRE TO LEAD MORE THAN WOMEN

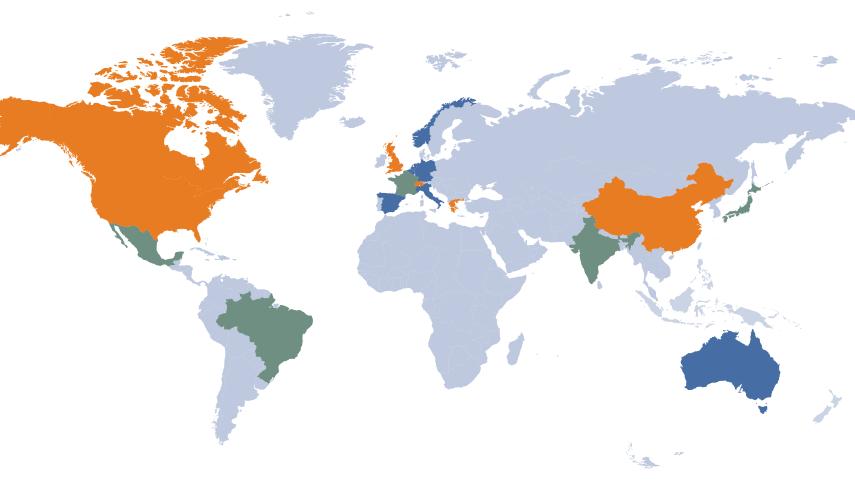

How much more?

7% - 10% China - 7% Canada - 7% UK - 7% Greece - 8% Switzerland - 9% Singapore - 9% USA - 10%

4% - 6% Italy - 5% Spain - 6% Norway - 6% Germany - 6% Australia - 6% Netherlands - 6%

0% - 3% France - 0% India - 1% Brazil - 3% Japan - 3% Mexico - 3%

Some countries are close to parity, while in others the gap is more significant.

MY SKILLS, MY CAREER

UK Millennials are focused on developing their individual skills, rather than learning to manage and lead others.

Individual Skills 56%

Managerial Skills 44%

Managerial Skills

- Leadership: 26% • People management: 18%
- Individual Skills

• Technical job skills: 22%

Personal skills / Teamwork /

Communication: 17% • IT/Technology: 17%

PLEASED, BUT NOT SATISFIED...

Two-thirds of Millennials in the UK are pleased with how they are being managed... however, most Millennials rank their own people management style more positively than their managers'. My manager

WHAT HIRING MANAGERS SAY...

Get it RIGHT • Learning new skills is key to advancement

Where Millennials

- 2 years is right amount of time to stay in role • Employers expect too much experience
- from job seekers • Low pay and no development mean it's time to go

Find out more at:

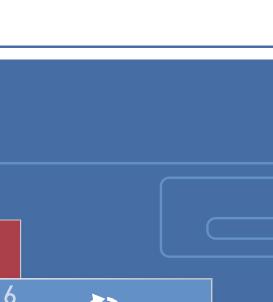

HIRING MANAGERS

ADVISE MILLENNIALS TO:

over a perfect fit

Lower initial pay

Develop soft skills

and development

Focus on networking

expectations

Prioritize an upward path