

NORTHERN IRELAND DEFIES BREXIT GLOOM TO HIT NINE YEAR HIRING HIGH

MANPOWERGROUP EMPLOYMENT OUTLOOK SURVEY REVEALS NORTHERN IRELAND IS ONE OF ONLY FIVE REGIONS NOT TO REPORT A FALL IN OPTIMISM

- Outlook of +7 % for the region, up three points since last quarter
- Finance, driving and construction leading the charge
- Construction confidence mirrors this quarter's national survey

14 MARCH 2017: Employers in Northern Ireland are not letting Brexit dent their confidence heading into the second quarter of 2017 according to ManpowerGroup, the world's workforce experts. Hiring intentions have jumped three points to +7%, a level not seen in the region since Q2 2008, and two points ahead of the UK national average.

The ManpowerGroup Employment Outlook Survey is based on responses from 2,119 UK employers. It asks whether employers intend to hire additional workers or reduce the size of their workforce in the coming quarter. It is the most comprehensive, forward-looking employment survey of its kind and is used as a key economic statistic by both the Bank of England and the UK government.

Amanda White, Head of Specialist Markets at ManpowerGroup, said: "After so many quarters languishing behind the rest of the nation, it is great to see Northern Ireland's jobs market has a spring in its step this Spring. The sectors that are powering this resurgence are finance, construction and driving. The finance roles include a number of support roles in contact centres and accountancy, while German language speakers are also in demand. In Belfast, global finance organisation, FinTru has recently boosted job prospects in this sector by committing to creating 160 new jobs over the next five years.

"Construction firms are hiring on all cylinders across the UK and Northern Ireland is no exception. Continued investment in new commercial buildings is creating jobs for bricklayers, floor layers, and joiners. This is leading to a skills shortage and driving up salaries, particularly on the temp side.

"While clients aren't asking us about the impact of Brexit yet, we know there will be a lot of questions once Article 50 has been triggered. The industrial and hospitality sectors rely heavily on EU workers and employers are focused on trying to overcome skills shortages without free movement of labour."

Nationally, private sector hiring has dropped to its weakest level since Q1 2014. Employers in six of the nine sectors surveyed reported a falling Outlook. The overall Net Employment Outlook, which includes both public and private sector employers, has dropped two points to +5%.

Mark Cahill, ManpowerGroup UK Managing Director: “The impending trigger of Article 50 is clearly affecting confidence in the jobs market. The private sector plans to hire at its slowest rate since 2014 (+4%), with only construction, manufacturing and transport and communications planning to hire at previous levels. The employment rate is at its highest level since records began in 1971, but if you lift the bonnet to look at the engine of the economy, job creation has slowed and employers are becoming more cautious. The companies which have powered Britain’s economy through the immediate post-referendum period are easing off the gas.”

All but five regions report falling Outlooks for the coming three months compared to the previous quarter. The biggest fallers are the two strongest Remain-supporting areas of the UK: Scotland, down 11 points to -3% and London, down five points to +3%. The West Midlands, the South West and Yorkshire & the Humber both fell three points to +5%. While the North East and South East are both down one point to +5% and +4% respectively. Northern Ireland and the North West are the only risers, with the North West also up three points to +6%. Three regions report unchanged Outlooks: the East (+9%) is still the most optimistic region ahead of the East Midlands (+8%), while Wales (+2%) reports the second weakest Outlook in the UK.

NOTES TO EDITORS

A ‘Net Employment Outlook’ is calculated by subtracting those employers who plan to reduce staffing levels from those who plan to hire staff. A positive result indicates that more employers plan to increase rather than decrease staffing levels; a negative result reflects the opposite. [% increase - % decrease]

Note that in Quarter 2 2008, the Survey adopted the TRAMO-SEATS model for seasonal adjustment of data. As a result, you may notice some seasonally adjusted data points change slightly from previous reports. This model is recommended by the Eurostat department of the European Union and the European Central Bank, and is widely used internationally.

About the Survey

The world leader in innovative workforce solutions, ManpowerGroup releases the ManpowerGroup Employment Outlook Survey quarterly to measure employers’ intentions to increase or decrease the number of employees in their workforce during the next quarter. It is the longest running, most extensive, forward-looking employment survey in the world, polling over 58,000 employers in 43 countries and territories. The survey serves as a bellwether of labour market trends and activities and is regularly used to inform the Bank of England’s Inflation Reports, as well as a regular data source for the European Commission, informing its EU Employment Situation and Social Outlook report the Monthly Monitor. ManpowerGroup’s independent survey data is also sourced by financial analysts and economists around the world to help determine where labour markets are headed.
