

LONDON HIRING OPTIMISM WEAKEST IN FOUR YEARS

MANPOWERGROUP EMPLOYMENT OUTLOOK SURVEY REVEALS THE CAPITAL IS LEAST CONFIDENT REGION FOR HIRING IN THE UK

- Outlook of 0% for the region
- Growing impact of Brexit on regional hiring and financial services sector
- Tech job opportunities are increasing

12 DECEMBER 2017: Employers in London are the most pessimistic about hiring in four years, according to ManpowerGroup, the world's workforce experts. Some demand for candidates persists, particularly due to regulatory changes in the financial sector, although supply across the region has been hit by Brexit uncertainty.

The Manpower Employment Outlook Survey is based on responses from 2,102 UK employers. It asks whether employers intend to hire additional workers or reduce the size of their workforce in the coming quarter. It is the most comprehensive, forward-looking employment survey of its kind and is used as a key economic statistic by both the Bank of England and the UK government.

Simon Edwards, Operations Director for Manpower, said: "We have not seen such hiring pessimism since 2013, when the country was getting back on its feet after the financial crisis. In line with the rest of the country, Brexit uncertainty appears to be the main culprit. Finance and Business Services jobs confidence across the country has dipped three points to +6%, and subdued hiring in London reflects this. When employers are recruiting, we can see that non-UK nationals are less willing to fill these roles in London, with sterling's devaluation denting the appeal of jobs in the capital. Many City firms are under pressure to appoint staff before European regulation from Mifid II¹ kicks in, and it has also become more difficult to appoint bar and restaurant workers since the EU referendum."

"However, there is some light on the horizon. Large technology firms have confirmed their confidence in post-Brexit Britain by announcing intentions to grow their workforces in London. Spotify is upsizing from its current premises as it looks to expand its team over the next two years. Facebook is also opening new offices in London which may lead to the creation of 800 new jobs, most of which will be in engineering."

Nationally, employers have recorded a slump in optimism with a national Outlook of +4%, the lowest level since 2012. Downbeat hiring intentions in sectors such as Finance and Business Services and the Public Sector have both weighed heavily on the national picture this quarter.

James Hick, Managing Director for ManpowerGroup Solutions: "The national Outlook hasn't dipped below +5% since the final quarter of 2012, yet this quarter we are seeing the worrying double whammy of a fall in confidence nationwide and flatlining hiring in London. This makes for a pretty bleak midwinter considering it comes at a time when Brexit talks are on a knife-edge. It will no doubt prompt fears that our high-flying jobs market might be cooling off.”

However, Brexit fears have actually boosted the transport sector by 10 points, to +12%, as employers “stockpile” permanent employees to avoid the pressure of a Brexit exodus on an aging workforce.

Hick continues: “The Transport sector is a key outlier in the dreary national picture. With online purchases accounting for £2 in every £5 of spending over the festive period, there is an immediate pressing need for professional drivers. This quarter the driver shortage is more acute than ever, thanks to a shrinking pool of talent. Combined with the skyrocketing demand, it is driving up pay significantly – many companies are having to pay premiums of up to 20% on their standard rates for drivers. With so many EU workers employed in driving and logistics roles, employers are already mindful of the cliff edge scenario of exiting EU workers that may accompany Brexit. We are therefore seeing companies in the transport sector “stockpiling” drivers by signing them up for permanent contracts ahead of May 2019.”

Elsewhere in the regions, the concentration of Transport and Haulage jobs in the “golden triangle” of Northampton, Milton Keynes and Daventry has helped propel the West Midlands and East Midlands to the top of the regional table with Outlooks of +12% and +11% respectively. This positivity radiates to Yorkshire and the Humber, which has built on a positive 2017 and is up one point to +8%. Looking further north, the North East and North West have seen contrasting fortunes this quarter. The North East is up four points to +6%, its most optimistic level since Q1, 2017. However, the North West is down to +3%, a two-point quarterly fall.

Hiring pessimism is acute in the South East, where the Outlook is just +3%. Conversely, Wales is riding high on +7%, its best start to a year since 2013 and four-point quarterly rise. Despite a one point fall from last quarter, Scotland is slightly above the national outlook on +5%. After a strong end to 2017, the outlook in Northern Ireland has fallen three points so the region will begin 2018 in line with the national average of +4%.

NOTES TO EDITORS

A ‘Net Employment Outlook’ is calculated by subtracting those employers who plan to reduce staffing levels from those who plan to hire staff. A positive result indicates that more employers plan to increase rather than decrease staffing levels; a negative result reflects the opposite. [% increase - % decrease]

Note that in Quarter 2 2008, the Survey adopted the TRAMO-SEATS model for seasonal adjustment of data. As a result, you may notice some seasonally adjusted data points change slightly from previous reports. This model is recommended by the Eurostat department of the European Union and the European Central Bank, and is widely used internationally.

About the Survey

The world leader in innovative workforce solutions, ManpowerGroup releases the Manpower Employment Outlook Survey quarterly to measure employers' intentions to increase or decrease the number of employees in their workforce during the next quarter. It is the longest running, most extensive, forward-looking employment survey in the world, polling nearly 59,000 employers in 42 countries and territories. The survey serves as a bellwether of labour market trends and activities and is regularly used to inform the Bank of England's Inflation Reports, as well as a regular data source for the European Commission, informing its EU Employment Situation and Social Outlook report the Monthly Monitor. ManpowerGroup's independent survey data is also sourced by financial analysts and economists around the world to help determine where labour markets are headed.
