LONDON STILL LEADING FOR JOBS

MANPOWER EMPLOYMENT OUTLOOK SURVEY REVEALS JOB PROSPECTS IN LONDON HAVE RISEN ON THE LAST QUARTER

- London's employers look to hire in the next quarter, with an Outlook of +10%
- Talent shortage driving focus on transferable skills
- Employers increasingly prepared to wait for star candidates

8 MARCH 2016: Job prospects in London are well ahead of the national average with an Outlook of +10%, according to Manpower, the world's workforce experts. The Employment Outlook in the capital has risen one point since the last quarter as confidence continues to build.

The Manpower Employment Outlook Survey is based on responses from 2,100 UK employers. It asks whether employers intend to hire additional workers or reduce the size of their workforce in the coming quarter. It is the most comprehensive, forward-looking employment survey of its kind and is used as a key economic statistic by both the Bank of England and the UK government.

"London's hiring prospects have been progressively getting better, culminating in this, the highest score in the region since Q3 2013", says Paul Laurie, Operations Manager, Manpower UK. "It is encouraging to see London going from strength to strength as businesses across the capital sharpen their focus on attracting the right talent."

"We have seen solid growth in financial services and the IT and Digital sectors which is particularly positive because it suggests businesses are investing in growth and future development. We're also seeing buoyant hiring intentions in the education sector although, as schools struggle to recruit for the top jobs, the lack of headteacher candidates may begin to jeopardise standards in schools."

"One of the key trends we're seeing is a rise in talent mapping, as employers seek to understand where talent is and how they might access it. The idea of a "teachable fit" is also gaining traction although some employers choose to hold out for the right candidate, extending their time frame for hiring into months and even years where strategic positions are concerned. We are advising that pay alone doesn't provide a silver bullet and offering flexible and remote working opportunities can provide a real differentiator – helping to cast the net wider and draw in talent that would otherwise remain out of reach."

Nationally, hiring intentions among Britain's employers in the first half of 2016 are at their strongest level since 2007. The national seasonally adjusted Net Employment Outlook is at +7% for the second consecutive quarter, a start to the year not seen for nearly a decade. But there are questions about whether this demand for talent can be fulfilled if Britain votes to leave the European Union.

James Hick, ManpowerGroup Solutions Managing Director: "British businesses continue to create the job opportunities that have helped get Britain back to work since the 2008 financial crisis. But while there's clearly the demand for workers, we also need to protect the supply of talent."

Employers of all shapes and sizes rely on the free movement of people inside Europe to find the skills they need. The latest employment statistics showed that of the 521,000 jobs created in the last 12 months, 215,000 of these were filled by people from elsewhere in the EU. Let's be realistic: we simply won't be able to replace overnight the skills these people bring to the UK if we leave the EU, and it's our economy that will suffer. Unemployment is at its lowest level since 2006 – it's unrealistic to suggest there's enough slack in the labour market out there to fill these jobs."

The West Midlands (+9%), the East (+10%), and the South West (+10%) all stand above the national average. The South East (+5%) and the East Midlands (+7%) both report falls from Q1 2016. The Outlooks in Wales (+3%) and Scotland (+6%) are in positive territory, while Northern Ireland reports its most positive outlook since 2007, at +8%. The picture in the north of England is mixed, with the North East (+6%) and North West (+2%) below the national average, while Yorkshire & the Humber matches the national average at +7%.

NOTES TO EDITORS

A 'Net Employment Outlook' is calculated by subtracting those employers who plan to reduce staffing levels from those who plan to hire staff. A positive result indicates that more employers plan to increase rather than decrease staffing levels; a negative result reflects the opposite. [% increase - % decrease]

Commentary and full details on every sector and region can be found in the survey report at manpowergroup.co.uk/meos, or by calling the Press Office on 0207 404 5959/ manpower@brunswickgroup.com

Commentary is based on seasonally adjusted data where available. Full survey results for each of the 42 countries and territories included in this quarter's survey, plus regional and global comparisons, can be found in the ManpowerGroup Press Room at www.manpowergroup.com/meos. In addition, all tables and graphs from the full report are available to be downloaded for use in publication or broadcast from the ManpowerGroup Web site at: <http://www.manpowergroup.com/press/meos.cfm>

Note that in Quarter 2 2008, the Survey adopted the TRAMO-SEATS model for seasonal adjustment of data. As a result, you may notice some seasonally adjusted data points change slightly from previous reports. This model is recommended by the Eurostat department of the European Union and the European Central Bank, and is widely used internationally.

About the Survey

The world leader in innovative workforce solutions, ManpowerGroup releases the Manpower Employment Outlook Survey quarterly to measure employers' intentions to increase or decrease the number of employees in their workforce during the next quarter. It is the longest running, most extensive, forward-looking employment survey in the world, polling nearly 59,000 employers in 42 countries and territories. The survey serves as a bellwether of labour market trends and activities and is regularly used to inform the Bank of England's Inflation Reports, as well as a regular data source for the European Commission, informing its EU Employment Situation and Social Outlook report the Monthly Monitor. ManpowerGroup's independent survey data is also sourced by financial analysts and economists around the world to help determine where labour markets are headed.
