

SOUTH EASTERN PROMISE FOR JOBS

MANPOWER EMPLOYMENT OUTLOOK SURVEY REVEALS A DECLINE IN HIRING INTENTIONS AFTER A STRONG START TO THE YEAR

- Employment Outlook of +5% for South East
- Increase in ‘volume’ hiring across all job types
- Candidate-driven market forcing companies to speed up recruitment or risk losing out on talent

8 MARCH 2016: Hiring prospects in the South East have fallen 6 percentage points to +5% going into the second quarter of 2016, according to Manpower, the world’s workforce experts. But while employment prospects have cooled since the high of +11% seen last quarter, employers remain positive and the region is seeing an increase in the number of permanent and temporary opportunities.

The Manpower Employment Outlook Survey is based on responses from 2,100 UK employers. It asks whether employers intend to hire additional workers or reduce the size of their workforce in the coming quarter. It is the most comprehensive, forward-looking employment survey of its kind and is used as a key economic statistic by both the Bank of England and the UK government.

“We’re seeing companies across the whole of the South East looking to hire temporary and permanent staff en masse at the minute,” said Krissie Davies, Operations Director at Manpower. “On the permanent side, the volume requirements are for customer service and call centre roles, especially around Southampton. On the temporary side, and nearer to Reading and Farnborough, volume is being driven by events. For example, we’re hiring up to 500 temporary porters, cleaners and stewards for the Farnborough Air Show.

“Looking at other hotspots across the region, towards Winchester we’re seeing steady demand for call centre workers to man the NHS’s 111 and 999 services. Meanwhile Portsmouth and Fareham are seeing greater demand within production and manufacturing and Reading is looking strong within the IT sector.

“We’re also seeing several signs of a candidate-driven market in the South East. Fewer applications for each vacancy means that candidates with in-demand skills are faced with a great deal of choice. There’s pressure building on the employers to speed up their recruitment processes and make decisions, or face losing out on valuable talent”

Nationally, hiring intentions among Britain’s employers in the first half of 2016 are at their strongest level since 2007. The national seasonally adjusted Net Employment Outlook is at +7% for the second consecutive quarter, a start to the year not seen for nearly a decade. But there are questions about whether this demand for talent can be fulfilled if Britain votes to leave the European Union.

James Hick, ManpowerGroup Solutions Managing Director: “British businesses continue to create the job opportunities that have helped get Britain back to work since the 2008 financial crisis. But while there's clearly the demand for workers, we also need to protect the supply of talent. Employers of all shapes and sizes rely on the free movement of people inside Europe to find the skills they need. The latest employment statistics showed that of the 521,000 jobs created in the last 12 months, 215,000 of these were filled by people from elsewhere in the EU. Let's be realistic: we simply won't be able to replace overnight the skills these people bring to the UK if we leave the EU, and it's our economy that will suffer. Unemployment is at its lowest level since 2006 – it's unrealistic to suggest there's enough slack in the labour market out there to fill these jobs.”

The West Midlands (+9%), the East (+10%), London (+10%), and the South West (+10%) all stand above the national average. The East Midlands (+7%) reports a fall from Q1 2016. The Outlooks in Wales (+3%) and Scotland (+6%) are in positive territory, while Northern Ireland reports its most positive outlook since 2007, at +8%. The picture in the north of England is mixed, with the North East (+6%) and North West (+2%) below the national average, while Yorkshire & the Humber matches the national average at +7%.

NOTES TO EDITORS

A 'Net Employment Outlook' is calculated by subtracting those employers who plan to reduce staffing levels from those who plan to hire staff. A positive result indicates that more employers plan to increase rather than decrease staffing levels; a negative result reflects the opposite. [% increase - % decrease]

Commentary is based on seasonally adjusted data where available. Full survey results for each of the 42 countries and territories included in this quarter's survey, plus regional and global comparisons, can be found in the ManpowerGroup Press Room at www.manpowergroup.com/meos. Note that in Quarter 2 2008, the Survey adopted the TRAMO-SEATS model for seasonal adjustment of data. As a result, you may notice some seasonally adjusted data points change slightly from previous reports. This model is recommended by the Eurostat department of the European Union and the European Central Bank, and is widely used internationally.

About the Survey

The world leader in innovative workforce solutions, ManpowerGroup releases the Manpower Employment Outlook Survey quarterly to measure employers' intentions to increase or decrease the number of employees in their workforce during the next quarter. It is the longest running, most extensive, forward-looking employment survey in the world, polling nearly 59,000 employers in 42 countries and territories. The survey serves as a bellwether of labour market trends and activities and is regularly used to inform the Bank of England's Inflation Reports, as well as a regular data source for the European Commission, informing its EU Employment Situation and Social Outlook report the Monthly Monitor. ManpowerGroup's independent survey data is also sourced by financial analysts and economists around the world to help determine where labour markets are headed.
