MANPOWER EMPLOYMENT OUTLOOK SURVEY REVEALS THAT OPTIMISM IN THE SOUTH WEST JOBS MARKET CONTINUES

- Employment Outlook of +10% for the South West
- Permanent roles on the rise with opportunities emerging in Bristol and Exeter
- Customer services and engineering remain the region's employment hotspots

8 MARCH 2016: The jobs market continues to thrive in the South West, according to Manpower, the world's workforce experts. With an Outlook of +10%, hiring intentions in the region remain well above the national average of +7%.

The Manpower Employment Outlook Survey is based on responses from 2,100 UK employers. It asks whether employers intend to hire additional workers or reduce the size of their workforce in the coming quarter. It is the most comprehensive, forward-looking employment survey of its kind and is used as a key economic statistic by both the Bank of England and the UK government.

"We are very pleased to see job prospects in the South West continue to be in firmly positive territory for the quarter ahead. Looking across the region's biggest cities, the appetite for hiring is evident across the board." says Krissie Davies, Operations Director at Manpower UK. "The Outlook this quarter has been driven by several factors, including increasing confidence in the engineering and financial sectors. Plymouth is seeing a sharp rise in demand for CNC engineers both in programming and operation, while customer service opportunities relating to PPI are driving lots of opportunities in Bristol. Exeter's recycling and motor trade industries are also delivering good growth."

"Permanent opportunities are now on the rise as employers gradually begin to phase out temporary-to-permanent roles in a bid to secure stronger commitment and loyalty from their employees. The scarcity of good candidates means that employers are having to adjust their expectations and increase the salaries they're offering. We're advising both employers and candidates to consider the entire package, as additional benefits, such as flexible working, can amount to a strong differentiator. A few of the region's employers are looking at how they can offer more remote working opportunities to provide employees with greater flexibility, but are first struggling to overcome data security concerns. However, a greater emphasis on productivity, rather than a narrow focus on hours worked, could really help employers to snap up the best candidates ahead of others."

Nationally, hiring intentions among Britain's employers in the first half of 2016 are at their strongest level since 2007. The national seasonally adjusted Net Employment Outlook is at +7% for the second consecutive quarter, a start to the year not seen for nearly a decade. But there are questions about whether this demand for talent can be fulfilled if Britain votes to leave the European Union.

James Hick, ManpowerGroup Solutions Managing Director: "British businesses continue to create the job opportunities that have helped get Britain back to work since the 2008 financial crisis. But while there's clearly the demand for workers, we also need to protect the supply of talent."

Employers of all shapes and sizes rely on the free movement of people inside Europe to find the skills they need. The latest employment statistics showed that of the 521,000 jobs created in the last 12 months, 215,000 of these were filled by people from elsewhere in the EU. Let's be realistic: we simply won't be able to replace overnight the skills these people bring to the UK if we leave the EU, and it's our economy that will suffer. Unemployment is at its lowest level since 2006 – it's unrealistic to suggest there's enough slack in the labour market out there to fill these jobs."

The West Midlands (+9%), the East (+10%) and London (+10%), all stand above the national average. The South East (+5%) and the East Midlands (+7%) both report falls from Q1 2016. The Outlooks in Wales (+3%) and Scotland (+6%) are in positive territory, while Northern Ireland reports its most positive outlook since 2007, at +8%. The picture in the north of England is mixed, with the North East (+6%) and North West (+2%) below the national average, while Yorkshire & the Humber matches the national average at +7%.

NOTES TO EDITORS

A 'Net Employment Outlook' is calculated by subtracting those employers who plan to reduce staffing levels from those who plan to hire staff. A positive result indicates that more employers plan to increase rather than decrease staffing levels; a negative result reflects the opposite. [% increase - % decrease]

Commentary is based on seasonally adjusted data where available. Full survey results for each of the 42 countries and territories included in this quarter's survey, plus regional and global comparisons, can be found in the ManpowerGroup Press Room at www.manpowergroup.com/meos. In addition, all tables and graphs from the full report are available to be downloaded for use in publication or broadcast from the ManpowerGroup Web site at: <http://www.manpowergroup.com/press/meos.cfm>

Note that in Quarter 2 2008, the Survey adopted the TRAMO-SEATS model for seasonal adjustment of data. As a result, you may notice some seasonally adjusted data points change slightly from previous reports. This model is recommended by the Eurostat department of the European Union and the European Central Bank, and is widely used internationally.

About the Survey

The world leader in innovative workforce solutions, ManpowerGroup releases the Manpower Employment Outlook Survey quarterly to measure employers' intentions to increase or decrease the number of employees in their workforce during the next quarter. It is the longest running, most extensive, forward-looking employment survey in the world, polling nearly 59,000 employers in 42 countries and territories. The survey serves as a bellwether of labour market trends and activities and is regularly used to inform the Bank of England's Inflation Reports, as well as a regular data source for the European Commission, informing its EU Employment Situation and Social Outlook report the Monthly Monitor. ManpowerGroup's independent survey data is also sourced by financial analysts and economists around the world to help determine where labour markets are headed.
