

SCOTLAND JOB OPTIMISM FLATLINES

MANPOWER EMPLOYMENT OUTLOOK SURVEY REVEALS SCOTLAND HAS THE LOWEST JOBS OUTLOOK IN OVER A YEAR

- Employment Outlook of 0% for the region
- Lower oil prices continue to negatively impact hiring intentions
- Rise in temporary roles fuels a candidate-driven market

13 SEPTEMBER 2016: Scotland remains one of the worst-performing regions for jobs with an Employment Outlook of 0%, according to Manpower, the world's workforce experts. Down on last quarter's +2%, and well below the national Outlook of +5%, Scotland has put in a muted performance, as employers become more cautious about long-term hiring.

The Manpower Employment Outlook Survey is based on responses from 2,102 UK employers. It asks whether employers intend to hire additional workers or reduce the size of their workforce in the coming quarter. It is the most comprehensive, forward-looking employment survey of its kind and is used as a key economic statistic by both the Bank of England and the UK government.

"Clearly the Outlook for this quarter is disappointing for job seekers," says Amanda White, Operations Manager at Manpower. "The fall in the oil price and dwindling resources continue to hit Scottish jobs hard, with the economy of Scotland's third largest city, Aberdeen, set to suffer a further slowdown. The referendum also continues to cast a long shadow over hiring intentions and is undoubtedly a contributing factor to the fall in recruitment for permanent positions."

"Hiring intentions north of the border have been relatively weak for some time but there are glimmers of activity. We are seeing a rise in temporary vacancies in both Glasgow and Edinburgh. In the capital, contracts for construction workers have soared, which is good news for candidates with the right skills in the sector. Buoyancy in the temporary market is also giving candidates the renewed confidence to be more selective in the roles they choose. A key trend we're seeing is a marked reluctance to transition from temporary to permanent positions where the opportunity arises, as candidates place growing value on flexibility, higher pay and the variety needed to develop a unique range of skills and experience."

The national seasonally adjusted Net Employment Outlook has remained at +5% for the final three months of the year, defying predictions that the vote for Brexit would trigger an immediate slump in recruitment plans. However, ManpowerGroup is warning that this could be the calm before the storm. Conducted in the weeks following the referendum, the survey shows that while UK job prospects have held firm, cracks in the ice are appearing with six out of nine sectors surveyed reporting a fall in jobs optimism.

Mark Cahill, ManpowerGroup UK Managing Director: "After the initial shock of Brexit, we're entering a new phase of prolonged economic uncertainty. The future of freedom of movement across the EU is of particular concern. As UK businesses are reliant on European talent to help fill the skills gap, we urge the government to prioritise maintaining the free movement of people across the EU during its negotiations. This would make sure the UK remains competitive, while sending a powerful message to skilled jobseekers– Britain remains open for business.”

Seven of the twelve regions in the UK reported falling Outlooks for the final three months of the year. The East Midlands is the most positive region (+9%), followed by London (+8%) and the East (+7%). Outside the North West, up one point to +6%, the north of England reports weak Outlooks with Yorkshire & Humberside falling to the joint-least optimistic Outlook of the country (-2%) and the North East dropping four points to +5%. Optimism across the South of England has strengthened, with the South East and South West up one point and two points respectively to +3%. Northern Ireland (-2%) and Wales (+4%) both fell six points, the joint biggest fallers with the West Midlands (+5%).

NOTES TO EDITORS

A 'Net Employment Outlook' is calculated by subtracting those employers who plan to reduce staffing levels from those who plan to hire staff. A positive result indicates that more employers plan to increase rather than decrease staffing levels; a negative result reflects the opposite. [% increase - % decrease]

Note that in Quarter 2 2008, the Survey adopted the TRAMO-SEATS model for seasonal adjustment of data. As a result, you may notice some seasonally adjusted data points change slightly from previous reports. This model is recommended by the Eurostat department of the European Union and the European Central Bank, and is widely used internationally.

About the Survey

The world leader in innovative workforce solutions, ManpowerGroup releases the Manpower Employment Outlook Survey quarterly to measure employers' intentions to increase or decrease the number of employees in their workforce during the next quarter. It is the longest running, most extensive, forward-looking employment survey in the world, polling nearly 59,000 employers in 42 countries and territories. The survey serves as a bellwether of labour market trends and activities and is regularly used to inform the Bank of England's Inflation Reports, as well as a regular data source for the European Commission, informing its EU Employment Situation and Social Outlook report the Monthly Monitor. ManpowerGroup's independent survey data is also sourced by financial analysts and economists around the world to help determine where labour markets are headed.
